10. A summary of major findings:

Building a theoretical framework on sexual abuse prevention education for primary school students based on life skills approach.

Detecting shortcomings and limitations in the process of sexual abuse prevention education for primary school students in Phu Tho Province.

Proposing six effective, necessary, and practical measures for sexual abuse prevention education for primary school students based on life skills approach.

11. Practical contributions

Primary schools can use the criteria for assessing sexual abuse prevention education for primary students based on life skills approach, including assessment scales on sexual abuse prevention skills; sexual abuse identification skills; emotional control skills; sexual abuse coping skills.

The thesis findings will be a necessary source of reference for sexual abuse prevention education for primary school students and also a useful reference for students of social work, applied physics, and primary education.

Furthermore, the thesis findings can help to prevent sexual abuse among primary school students, solving related social problems; reduce financial resources and social costs for the rehabilitation of psychological and physiological injuries for victims of abuse, thereby ensuring the implementation of social security.

12. Suggestions for future research: Supportive consultation for teachers (and parents) in taking care of and educating sexually abused children.
